Objectives	This subject aims to introduce students to the psychology of personality, one of the most basic and important branches of psychology. Students will be able to describe and explain the origins of personality, its development and change through studying in lectures and seminar discussions a number of classic and well-received theories of personality, and on this basis, students will also be able to acquire more self-understanding which will lead to more personal growth and development.
Intended Learning Outcomes (Note 1)	Upon completion of the subject, students will be able to: a. know the major personality theories, analysing their philosophical background, assumptions of human beings and methodology used; b. explore specific personal / social / psychological issues in relation to tenets derived from these theories; c. appreciate the influences of culture on the study and application of personality theories.

Subject Synopsis/ Indicative Syllabus (Note 2)	1. The major models of human a. Historical and philosophical background of a selected number of personality theories b. The exposition of the theoretical tenets of each of the theories such as i) Psychoanalytic perspective ii) Learning and Social Learning perspective iii) Humanistic perspective iv) Cognitive perspective v) Bio-sociological perspective 2. Analysis of assumptions of each of the abovementioned perspectives 3. Understanding the methodology employed by psychologists in their knowledge building 4. Cultural issues in studying Chinese personality
Teaching/Learning Methodology (Note 3)	Two major teaching and learning strategies are used to achieve different learning objectives. Lectures are useful for disseminating knowledge on personality theories and findings of empirical personality research. Students also learn through presentation on a specific topic and peer discussion in seminars, and their understanding of the subject can be continuously monitored in seminar participation.
Assessment Methods in Alignment with Intended Learning Outcomes (Note 4)	<table><tr><th rowspan="2">Specific assessment methods/tasks</th><th rowspan="2">% weighting</th><th colspan="6">Intended subject learning outcomes to be assessed (Please tick as appropriate)</th></tr><tr><th>a</th><th>b</th><th>c</th><th></th><th></th><th></th></tr><tr><td>1. Similarly, writing up an individual paper can also address learning outcomes concerning theory and real life integration. Quiz, on the other hand, is a direct way to assess students’ knowledge and level of understanding of theories and research methods. Note 1: Intended Learning Outcomes

Intended learning outcomes should state what students should be able to do or attain upon completion of the subject. Subject outcomes are expected to contribute to the attainment of the overall programme outcomes.

Note 2: Subject Synopsis/ Indicative Syllabus

The syllabus should adequately address the intended learning outcomes. At the same time over-crowding of the syllabus should be avoided.

Note 3: Teaching/Learning Methodology

This section should include a brief description of the teaching and learning methods to be employed to facilitate learning, and a justification of how the methods are aligned with the intended learning outcomes of the subject.

Note 4: Assessment Method

This section should include the assessment method(s) to be used and its relative weighting, and indicate which of the subject intended learning outcomes that each method purports to assess. It should also provide a brief explanation of the appropriateness of the assessment methods in assessing the intended learning outcomes.
