Objectives	This course examines social work practice and will introduce a holistic parametric framework for understanding the link between individual-social phenomenon and micro-macro levels of actions; and the change process in generalist practice. Students will develop values, knowledge and skills necessary for the provision of professional services to individuals, families, groups and communities within the framework of generalist practice.
Intended Learning Outcomes	Upon completion of the subject, students will be able to: - conceptualize individual, and/or family issues, and/or social problems according to the parametric framework of social work practice; - identify and select the most relevant and appropriate relational modalities for intervention; and - perform the roles and tasks of social workers in working with service users in different phases of the generalist helping process

Subject Synopsis/ Indicative Syllabus	1. Critical examination of the generalist and unifying frameworks and the development a parametric framework in conceptualizing social work practice. 2. Mastery of the general process model of social work practice --- its application in working with individuals and families, groups, and community. 3. Appreciation of the four major working modalities in social work practice and its basic theories in social work tradition. 4. Critical understanding of the roles played by the socio-political, cultural and historical context in shaping the construction of social work theories.
Teaching/Learning Methodology	Lectures will be used to introduce theories, concepts and factual knowledge. Seminar presentations and discussions will be used to explore controversial issues related to theories and practice. Laboratory exercises will help students identify and recognize relevant skill sets.
